To Whom It May Concern:

Re: Jeremy Whittaker

I am a Technology Coordinator with a small school district in rural Arizona. I have worked with Jeremy on a few large-scale projects for the district. Jeremy is a resourceful, creative, and solution oriented person who was frequently able to come up with new and innovative approaches to obstacles during the implementation of projects.

Often in a school district you are faced with budget restrictions and a lack of resources for projects, Jeremy understood exactly what I needed done from the onset and how to get it done quickly, effectively, and efficiently. He often completes projects ahead of schedule with better than expected outcomes.

Jeremy has a wide knowledge base that allows him to work on a variety of computer issues whether it is hardware, software or programming related. He works hard and researches issues to not only fix them, but prevent them from happening again. The proactive manner in which he works is refreshing from the ordinary reactive manner of most technical support professionals.

In the ever-changing world of IT, Jeremy is able to stay on top of the information and recommend new and exciting technology. He has become a great source of information for our school district. We have acted on some of his innovative ideas to reduce cost and improve student access to computers. Some of his projects included Terminal Servers, Symantec Solutions, Web Server, Outlook Servers, and Ghosting procedures. Also, the district was able to create two small labs from re-built computers that were made possible by his hard work and innovative ideas.

It has been a pleasure working with Jeremy and I will be saddened to see him go, however, I also understand his need to further his career. I can honestly say that I would recommend him for any technology related position without any reservations. Jeremy would be a great asset for any company.

Respectfully,
